

PATERSONIA

PATERSONIA is a pendant lamp that can be put together from three identical, flat metal discs.

The sheets have incisions, which make them stiffen when hanging together and no additional screws are required. For shipping, the three plates can be placed on top of each other, which results in a small packaging size.

Since all three levels are flat, the perceived spatial volume of the lamp varies greatly with the viewing angle. This way, a large black circle can become a thin line in the next moment.

Patersonia is realized in three sizes: 200mm, 300mm and 400mm in diameter.

The interdisciplinary design studio ANTE UP is run by Benedikt Stonawski and Hauke Unterburg. After studying at the Design Academy Eindhoven and the HfG Karlsruhe, they went on to start their own studio in Vienna in 2019.

Whether CNC-bent plastic or computer-controlled installations made of rattan: In their work they combine traditional craftsmanship with modern manufacturing techniques.
